St. Cyril of Alexandria (380-444), Bishop and Doctor of the Church
Commentary on the Gospel of John 5.2

"Then the heavens opened. The Holy Spirit descended on Jesus"

If it is claimed that Christ received the Holy Spirit, must be understood as man and because it suited humanity. No doubt he is the Son of God the Father, begotten of the same substance before the incarnation and before all time. However, he did not experience any sadness on hearing the voice of the Father: "You are my son, I begotten."

One who is God, begotten before all ages; it is conceived today as the Father says. This means that the Father welcomes us in him as adoptive children, for all mankind is assumed in Christ man. In this sense we can say that the Father, but the Son and the Holy Spirit had, he gives it back so that we could participate in this Spirit, through the Son. Christ received the Spirit for their own benefit, but for our benefit that we belong to him. It is by the grace of Christ who comes to us all good.

San Cirilo de Alejandría (380-444), obispo y doctor de la Iglesia
Comentario sobre el evangelio de Juan 5,2

"Entonces se abrieron los cielos. El Espíritu Santo descendió sobre Jesús"

Si se afirma que Cristo recibió el Espíritu Santo, hay que entenderlo en cuanto hombre y porque convenía así a la humanidad. Sin duda, él es el Hijo de Dios Padre, engendrado de su misma sustancia antes de la encarnación y antes de todos los tiempos. No obstante, no experimentó ninguna tristeza al oír la voz del Padre: "Tú eres mi hijo, yo te engendrado hoy."

Aquel que es Dios, engendrado antes de todos los siglos, es engendrado hoy, como lo dice el Padre. Esto significa que el Padre nos acoge en él como hijos adoptivos, porque toda la humanidad se encuentra asumida en Cristo hombre. En este sentido se puede afirmar que el Padre, aunque su Hijo ya poseía el Espíritu Santo, se lo da de nuevo para que nosotros pudiéramos participar de este Espíritu, gracias al Hijo. Cristo no recibió el Espíritu para su propio provecho, sino para provecho nuestro que estamos incorporados a él. Es por gracia de Cristo que nos vienen todos los bienes.
